

Activate Omeka account

Go to your Marist email and search for an email from the English 392 Administration titled “Activate your account with the English 392 repository”.

Click on the link inside the email.

This will take you to a form where you can create your password for the site.

A screenshot of a web form titled 'User Activation' in a dark blue banner. Below the banner, it says 'Hello Desiree Dighton. Your username is desiree.dighton'. There are two sections: 'Create a Password' with a text input field containing seven asterisks, and 'Re-type the Password' with a text input field containing seven asterisks. Below these fields is a green 'Activate' button. At the bottom of the page, it says 'Powered by Omeka | Version 2.7.1'.

The User Activation screen above also contains your username. Your username will be firstname.lastname. After you create your password, you will be able to login to the site with your username and the password you just created. Click the Remember Me? box if you want the browser to store your username and password for future visits to the site.

The image shows a login interface for 'Omeka English 392'. At the top, the word 'Omeka' is displayed in white on a dark blue banner, with 'English 392' in red text below it. A light green message box states 'You may now log in to Omeka.' Below this, there are three input fields: 'Username*' containing 'desiree.dighton', 'Password*' containing eight asterisks, and a 'Remember Me?' checkbox which is checked. A green 'Log In' button is positioned below the password field. At the bottom, there is a red link that says '(Lost your password?)'.
